SARAH KAYCI

Sarah has always been interested in art her whole life. Every so often she would get the paint brushes out and mainly paint from photographs for people, creating a poster collaboration for a modern look. I could never quite paint anything I was happy with enough to put on my walls at home. Whether it is abstract or fine art - I needed some inspiration.

A few years ago whilst travelling to the South of France, I came across a beautiful piece of work in a window of a small gallery in the back streets of Cannes. The Mona Lisa, she looked almost transparent with the appearance of Superman flying straight through her. I had never seen anything like it before, it was huge, probably 4f x 6f. It had both the elegance of a fine art portrait combined with the modern pop art of today. I knew then that this was the style of art for me.

Sarah started putting pictures together that were personal to her, whether it is an inspirational figure or something she enjoyed from her childhood. Soon enough she couldn't stop painting and from creating just a few layered style pieces, not only were people buying her work, she was also painting private commissions for clients.

She is now in the process of creating my new phase with a new slant...
